

DelDOT Recognizes Employees Of The Year

Dover-Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) Secretary, Anne P. Canby, recently named the agency's Employees of the Year. Receiving top honors for 1998 were Donna Bundek and Kevin Cunningham. The recipients were selected from a field of fifteen quarterly You Make a Difference award winners to compete against representatives from other state agencies for the Delaware Award for Excellence and Commitment in State Service.

The ten-member selection committee recognized Ms. Bundek for her commitment to her work and positive attitude, which has spanned a 24-year career with DelDOT. She is known for handling multiple tasks under adverse conditions and difficult deadlines. Secretary Canby commended the Traffic Data Specialist for her exceptional job performance and dedication. Ms. Bundek lives in Little Creek with her two children.

Mr. Cunningham was recognized for having "served as an ambassador to the public," through his position as the Department's Archeologist. Secretary Canby noted that his efforts "have improved the effectiveness of transportation planning, saved tax dollars and helped to give Delaware's heritage back to the people of the First State." Mr. Cunningham has been employed with DelDOT's Division of Planning for 15 years. He currently resides with his wife and two daughters in Harrington.

An award ceremony was held on December 23, 1998 at DelDOT's Administration Building.
