

5. PREPARERS

Carol A. Benenson is the Director of Research of Killinger Kise Franks Straw's Historic Preservation Group. She holds a Master of Science degree in historic preservation from the University of Pennsylvania with extensive course work in American architectural history. In addition, Ms. Benenson has five years of continuous work experience in the field of historic preservation, much of which has involved rural and urban historic sites surveys. With a primary focus on the Mid-Atlantic region, she has acquired considerable expertise in historic and architectural research, National Register evaluation, and preservation planning.

Mark A. Bower serves as the Director of Technical Services of Killinger Kise Franks Straw's Historic Preservation Group. Mr. Bower holds a Master of Science degree in historic preservation from the University of Pennsylvania, to which he adds nine years of full-time work experience in both the public and private sectors. His particular expertise is focused on historic sites surveys, historic structure analysis, and materials conservation. Mr. Bower has also held positions in the field of curatorial management and architecture.

Sara L. Reiter is a Research Assistant in Killinger Kise Franks Straw's Historic Preservation Group. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in history from Oberlin College. Ms. Reiter has a combined four years of full-time work experience in the field of historic preservation, having worked for both the public and private sectors. Her expertise is concentrated in historical research, National Register evaluation, and preservation planning.