

Polluted Runoff

When it rains, water can soak into the ground, evaporate, or run over land into our creeks, rivers, and lakes.

Runoff, or stormwater, is the water that runs overland into local waterways.

This runoff may be become polluted runoff as it flows over land and picks up debris and chemicals.

