

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This project could not have been completed without the assistance and guidance of many individuals. First and foremost, Kevin W. Cunningham, DelDot Archaeologist, deserves a special expression of gratitude for providing administrative support and vital technical information throughout the project.

Daniel R. Griffith, Joan N. Larrivee, Gwen Davis Coffin, and Alice H. Guerrant, of the Delaware State Historic Preservation Office, provided regulatory guidance, technical assistance, and archival material. Charles Fithian of the Island Field Museum provided access to archaeological collections. Jay Custer of the University of Delaware provided information pertaining to the previous archaeological survey along SR 896 and access to the collections at the University's Center for Archaeological Research. Deborah Paruszewski of the Iron Hill Museum of Natural History provided important unpublished sources and data about jasper quarrying. And, most importantly, Mr. Edward W. Cooch, Jr., allowed access to his property to conduct the archaeological work at the Iron Hill East site.

The appendix of this report lists all individuals who were of key assistance during the project. Several members of the cultural resources staff of Parsons Engineering Science deserve special mention here. Diane Halsall supplied invaluable administrative assistance. As equipment manager, Ray Chune kept the field crew supplied with the necessary tools of the trade. And as usual, Carter Shields ably directed laboratory functions, and Sulah Lee provided her standard, high-quality illustrations.
