

WHO BENEFITS

Good highways mean many things to many people.

Certainly, they contribute to convenience and pleasure. Practically everything we eat, drink or wear comes to our doors either all or part of the way by motor vehicle. The family car is used in almost every phase of family life — work, play emergencies, errands. With increased urbanization and suburbanization has come even greater dependence upon highway transport.

But good highways mean a good deal more. Public health and safety are facilitated by a modern highway system. National defense is vitally dependent on motor vehicle transportation. The school bus and the modern highway make the consolidated school possible.

And most important, Delaware's highways are essential to the expansion of industry and actually create new enterprises. Arteries of our economic system, they pump business, industry, tourism, jobs and prosperity through our state.
